There were six contestants, there being only three at the last contest. There was also

r a marked improvement in thought and defivery.

At about 8 o'clock the Champion band struck up a march and the six contestants took their places in order of speaking upon the platform.

Mr. W. G. Smith was the first orator, his subject being "Immortality of Character." His delivery was fair and the thoughts presented were still better. His oration was the shortest of the evening. He and Mr.
